Inducement: Adoption Language We Must Understand

Adoption Competent Mental Health · https://bridges4mentalhealth.org/hub/adoption-competence/inducement-adoption-language-we-must-understand/

In the context of adoption, "inducement" refers to how children communicate their deeply buried feelings of abandonment non-verbally, often inducing similar emotions in their adoptive parents without conscious awareness. This communication, though intense and sometimes negative, is a vital part of the healing process as children begin to feel safe within their new families and express long-suppressed emotions, ultimately strengthening the adoption bond and facilitating healing for both children and parents alike.

Read More