This webinar, hosted by the National Association of Community Health Centers and the School-Based Health Alliance, focused on enhancing partnerships and operational considerations for school-based health care. It emphasized the distinction between school-run clinics and FQHC-hosted school-based health centers, highlighting the evidence supporting integrated education and health outcomes for school-aged populations. Participants gained insights into successful planning strategies, including tools for SBHC start-up and navigating challenges associated with delivering care at the education-health intersection.
